Plumbland Village

Hares: Rocky Rock and Plum Tart

It was a belated happy new year to us all. The crowds were out and about - and a group of them flew past in brightly coloured lycra, on smart new bicycles as we gathered for Christmas treats at the start. As promised it was a crisp and dry morning - although all that was to change later on. It was new territory. Never in Hash history - have we ventured to Plumbland previously - even those of us who might have got lost around Bridekirk, in the dim and distant past.

With multiple choices at the start - it took a while to find a deviously disguised start through a farmyard. And a yomp across sodden fields beckoned. For those looking for Plum's shiggy - it could be found in abundance. Slippery river crossings, and greasy stiles beckoned - but fortunately nobody disappeared into the water (even Huggy - when the opportunities arose!).

Not having a clue where we were, two jugs pointed out neighbouring villages of Arkleby and Parsonby - although I'm not sure we actually ventured into them.

The route and plentiful fish hooks and numbered backtracking kept the pack together well, and a good morning was had by all. We returned to the centre of Plumbland - for light refreshments, before heading back to Tallentire for traditional Cumbrian fare -Tatie Pot, pickled everything, and a good pint!

Thanks to Rocky & Plum for introducing us to this new hashing territory. I'm sure we may be visiting the surrounding area again - having supplied a very enjoyable New Year Hash!

On On!
