

Hash Report

Run 261 – Broughton Moor, 4th December 2016

Hares – Plum Tart and Rocky Rock

A select band of three runners and one walker congregated just south of Broughton Moor on this sunny, frosty morning. After the Hares finally succeeded in extricating us from the clutches of a local who couldn't be stopped from bombarding us with interesting information, we set off into the village and then soon enough onto the frosty fields to the north-west. We entered a vast network of field-side and woodland paths with fine views out to sea - the paths proved very firm and runnable in the cold weather, much to the dismay, I suspect, of the Hares, who'd hoped for a thaw to give lots of knee-deep mud!

We negotiated not one, not two, but three fish-hooks and a couple of check-backs before finally coming back into Flimby Great Wood with its interesting industrial archaeology, now covered in ivy and brambles.

After hitting the road near the end, some of us were delirious with thirst and exhaustion and succumbed to following the "local knowledge" of the Religious Advisor to get us to the On In. Alas, he took us on a false trail through the muddiest bit of the whole route!

It was an excellent hash and also, for me, had two bonuses – first, I'd never been to the area before, and second, I discovered what WTF means – it stands for "What The Fish-hook."
